INTRODUCTIONI. SUMMARY JUDGMENT IN FAVOR OF THE COMMISSIONER IS APPROPRIATE

Rather than provide this Court with logical well-reasoned arguments in opposition to Commissioner Demetrios A. Boutris' Motion for Summary Judgment, or in the Alternative, Partial Summary Judgment, plaintiffs dismiss key federal cases off-handedly, misconstrue legislative intent and cases and even misquote this Court's own ruling. Such a lackadaisical approach to arguing a case of first impression before this Court is not borne of confidence in their own position, but rather of the weakness in the law to support Plaintiffs' contentions.

Plaintiffs have failed to establish a Congressional grant of authority that would allow the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency ("OCC") to expand its limited powers to encompass complete regulation of corporations that are owned at least in part by national banks. Plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate the OCC did not exceed its authority in promulgating and adopting regulations over state-chartered legal entities to the exclusion of all state regulation.

Moreover, plaintiffs have failed to establish that the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act ("DIDMCA") preempts the state per diem interest laws that do not expressly limit the amount or rate of interest, but rather determine the date upon which an institution may begin charging interest. Finally, Plaintiffs have failed to establish that the Commissioner has retaliated against Plaintiffs in any manner or that this action is proper under 42 U.S.C. section 1983.

Therefore, the Commissioner respectfully requests this Court grant his motion for Summary Judgment.

ARGUMENTI. THE OCC DOES NOT HAVE EXCLUSIVE AUTHORITY OVER NATIONAL BANK OPERATING SUBSIDIARIES*A. Plaintiffs Concede There Is No Express Delegation Of Authority From Congress To The OCC Giving The OCC The Authority To Promulgate Regulations Governing Operating Subsidiaries

Plaintiffs have failed to provide this Court with any citation to express delegation of authority from Congress to the OCC, giving the OCC the authority to promulgate regulations that have the

1 effect of giving the OCC exclusive regulatory authority over operating subsidiaries, thus conceding
2 that no such authority exists. Absent such an express delegation of authority, the OCC regulations 3 are invalid and not entitled to deference. Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council,
4 Inc., 467 U.S. 837 (1984); United States v. Mead Corporation, 533 U.S. 218 (2001); Motion Picture
5 Association of America, Inc. v. Federal Communications Commission, 309 F.3d 796, 801 (D.C. Cir.
6 2002).

7 1. Plaintiffs Concede Key Federal Decisions By Failing To Provide 8 Authority Contrary To These Cases

9 The Motion Picture Association of America, Inc. v. Federal Communications
10 Commission, 309 F.3d 796, 801 (D.C. Cir. 2002) case (“MPAA”), is the only federal appellate case 11 that addresses similar issues as are presented for the first time to this Court. Yet, plaintiffs are 12 unable to counter the persuasive rationale of the District of Columbia’s Circuit Court of Appeals 13 decision with more than a footnoted dismissal. MPAA, which involves an analogous situation of 14 constitutional rights at issue and a federal agency exceeding its general grant of authority, dictates a 15 ruling that the OCC has exceeded its authority in promulgating and adopting regulations that seek to 16 give it regulatory authority over state-chartered operating subsidiaries, to the exclusion of the states.
17 See Plaintiffs’ Opposition, at page 6, n. 3.

18 Plaintiffs’ attempt to discount MPAA by arguing that “[i]n this case, there is no issue 19 of freedom of speech. . .” is unpersuasive. Id. There are equally as great, if not greater 20 constitutional implications than freedom of speech presented before this Court, specifically, the 21 Tenth Amendment’s acknowledgement of state sovereignty and thus, California’s powers to regulate 22 and enforce its laws against a state-chartered corporate citizen such as WFHMI.

23 Plaintiffs’ reference to the Tenth Amendment as a “tautology” is misplaced and 24 misconstrues the Supreme Court’s recognition of the amendment as an important rule of 25 constitutional interpretation. Plaintiffs’ Opposition, page 9. As the Supreme Court stated in the very 26 case relied on by plaintiffs, the Tenth Amendment “. . . is a mere affirmation of what, upon any just 27 reasoning, is a necessary rule interpreting the constitution. Being an instrument of limited and 28

1 enumerated powers, it follows irresistibly, that what is not conferred, is withheld, and belongs to the 2 state authorities.” New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144, 156 (1992).

3 Furthermore, plaintiffs’ argument that operating subsidiaries such as WFHMI are 4 engaged in interstate commerce, and that this therefore trumps California’s Tenth Amendment 5 rights, is not well taken. It has been well-settled by the Supreme Court that certain activities are 6 beyond the reach of Congress and regulation pursuant to the commerce clause. Those activities 7 beyond Congress’ reach are those that are completely within a particular State and with which it is 8 not necessary for Congress to interfere for the purpose of executing some general power of the 9 government. Katzenbach v. McClung, 379 U.S. 294, 297 (1964). As set forth more fully in the 10 Commissioner’s Motion for Summary Judgment, there is no question but that WFHMI is a state-11 chartered corporation, engaged in business in the State of California. As such, it is subject to state 12 regulation. The Commissioner is in no way seeking to regulate or interfere with national banks or 13 their ability to conduct business in California. Accordingly, there are no interstate commerce issues 14 presented in this case.

15 In MPAA the FCC unsuccessfully argued that its general grant of authority was 16 sufficient to support its promulgation of regulations governing video description in that it gave the 17 agency the authority to regulate “interstate and foreign commerce in communication by wire and 18 radio so as to make available, so far as possible, to all people of the United States. . . . a rapid, 19 efficient, Nation-wide, and world-wide wire and communication service. . . .” Id. at 800 20 (summarizing § 1 of the Communications Act). The agency also contended that a specific statutory 21 provision, 47 U.S.C. § 613, did not bar it from promulgating the regulations and, therefore, gave it 22 the implied authority to promulgate them. Id. at 806-807.

23 The appellate court rejected the agency’s arguments and found that in adopting 24 regulations requiring video description to provide better access to the blind, the FCC exceeded its 25 authority as the regulations had the effect of governing programming content, which in turn had 26 constitutional implications. MPAA, 309 F.3d 796, 804-805. The court found that important issues 27 such as the implication of constitutional rights required more than a general grant of authority; an 28 express grant of authority was needed in order for the FCC to prevail on its claim. Id. at 805.

1 Analogous to the FCC's overreaching in MPAA, the plaintiffs are relying on the 2 OCC's attempt to expand its general grant of authority permitting regulation of national banks to 3 encompass exclusive regulation of operating subsidiaries, which are state-chartered legal entities and 4 need be only partially owned by national banks. However, like the FCC, the OCC lacks the express 5 Congressional authorization or delegation to expand its jurisdiction in such a manner where a state's 6 sovereignty is implicated. In promulgating 12 C.F.R. § 7.4006, the OCC cites as its authority its 7 general grant of authority, 12 U.S.C. § 93a, and the statute which vests in the OCC visitorial 8 authority over national banks, 12 U.S.C. § 484.

9 Even a casual review of these statutes by plaintiffs would reveal the fallacy in their 10 arguments that the OCC is entitled to exclusive visitorial authority over operating subsidiaries.
11 Neither statute even mentions "operating subsidiaries", nor gives the authority to the OCC to 12 promulgate regulations granting visitorial rights to the OCC over such entities to the exclusion of the 13 states. By contrast, at least the FCC had a colorable argument that it was entitled to promulgate 14 regulations that made programming accessible to all individuals. Even so, the MPAA appellate court 15 found the regulations as promulgated affected programming content (i.e. had First Amendment 16 implications), which was not expressly authorized by Congress, and therefore was an impermissible 17 expansion of the FCC's authority. Here, where the OCC's express authority is to ". . . prescribe 18 rules and regulations to carry out the responsibilities of the office", just as the FCC's powers were 19 held in check in MPAA, limitations must be placed on the OCC's claimed authority when it 20 implicates a constitutional right.¹

21 What plaintiffs fail to address, and what is crucial to this case, is the fact that neither 22 12 U.S.C. § 93a nor 12 U.S.C. § 24 (Seventh) give the OCC the express authority to promulgate 23 regulations interpreting or regulating the "incidental powers" given to national banks. In other 24

25 ¹ The plaintiffs misconstrue the Commissioner's position with regard to the OCC's general grant of authority and the 26 limitations upon that authority. Plaintiffs wrongfully state that the "Commissioner contends that 12 U.S.C. §93a is not 27 broad enough to support the OCC's regulations interpreting national banks' "incidental powers" under 24 (Seventh) to 28 include the power to establish and operate operating subsidiaries." Plaintiffs' Opposition, pages 3-4, n. 2. In point of fact, the Commissioner specifically acknowledges that cases interpreting 24 (Seventh) have found that the OCC has the authority to determine what powers are, in fact, incidental to the business of banking for national banks. Defendant's Points and Authorities in Support of Motion for Summary Judgment, at page 15; See also NationsBank of North Carolina, N.A. v. Variable Annuity Life Insurance Co., 513 U.S. 251 (1995).

1 words, just because the OCC may be permitted to determine that national banks are allowed to 2 establish operating subsidiaries, it does not logically follow that the OCC, therefore, has the 3 exclusive regulatory authority over such operating subsidiaries, which are state-chartered entities.

4 Furthermore, the general grant of authority upon which the OCC is relying, 12 U.S.C.
5 § 93a, is not nearly as broad as the FCC’s general grant of authority in MPAA, wherein the court
6 restrained the agency and held that the regulations were not properly promulgated. Cf. 12 U.S.C. § 7 93a; 47 U.S.C. § 154. The court stated that the FCC’s authority was broad, but was “not without 8 limits.” MPAA, at 804. Current FCC Chairman, Michael K. Powell, stated it best in dissenting to 9 the FCC’s order: “Were an agency afforded carte blanche under such a broad provision, irrespective 10 of subsequent congressional acts that did not squarely prohibit action, it would be able to expand 11 greatly its regulatory reach.” MPAA, at 806 (quoting former Commissioner Powell’s dissent, found 12 at 15 F.C.C.R. 15276) (italics in original).

13 Finally, contrary to plaintiffs’ assertions, Minnesota v. Fleet Mortgage Corp., 181 14 F.Supp.2d 995, is instructive in this case. Plaintiffs’ misstate the holding of Fleet on page 8 of their 15 opposition. Rather than acknowledge that the Fleet court found that although the mortgage company 16 was an operating subsidiary of a national bank, it was not a “bank” for purposes of the statute at 17 issue, plaintiffs, in reliance on an inapplicable footnote, contend that Fleet held that “states can 18 regulate national banks’ operating subsidiaries when doing so is expressly authorized by federal 19 law.” Compare Id. at 999 with Plaintiffs’ Opposition, page 8 (emphasis in original) (citing Fleet, at 20 page 1002, n. 10). More importantly, the District Court rejected the OCC’s arguments that it must 21 have “exclusive jurisdiction” over such operating subsidiaries, stating that “[t]here is no direct 22 authority establishing exclusive jurisdiction over national banks operating subsidiaries.” Id. at 1001-23 1002.

24 In sum, plaintiffs have failed to distinguish applicable case authority or provide this 25 Court with alternative reliable evidence disputing the Commissioner’s position. Therefore, the 26 Commissioner is entitled to summary judgment.

1 2. Neither The Implied Reference To Operating Subsidiaries Nor The 2 Senate Report On the GLBA Are Sufficient Authority To Support The 3 OCC's Promulgation Of Regulations Regarding Operating Subsidiaries

4 As MPAA instructs, unless there is an express grant of authority, the OCC has no 5 ability to exercise exclusive visitorial rights over operating subsidiaries. Yet, plaintiffs attempt to 6 rely on the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLBA), codified at 12 U.S.C. §24a, for the proposition that 7 operating subsidiaries are impliedly recognized in the GLBA. Plaintiffs' Opposition, pages 6-7.
8 Even assuming plaintiffs' interpretation of the GLBA is correct; this implied recognition is 9 insufficient to support the OCC's promulgation of regulations. See United States v. Mead, 533 U.S.
10 218 (2001); Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837 (1984).
11 Further, while the Senate Report on the GLBA may have acknowledged national banks' ability to 12 conduct activities through operating subsidiaries, this report in no way acts as express Congressional 13 authorization for the OCC to promulgate regulations giving it exclusive regulatory power over, and 14 preempting state regulation of, operating subsidiaries.²

15 Not disputed by plaintiffs, is that 12 U.S.C. Section 24a permits national banks to 16 establish "financial subsidiaries," which are authorized to engage in limited activities, such as 17 insurance sales and the sale of securities. In defining a "financial subsidiary," Congress explicitly 18 limited the scope of the definition and did not expressly include operating subsidiaries of national 19 banks. 12 U.S.C. §24a(g)(3). Despite Plaintiff's apparent reliance on subsection (g)(3), this is a 20 definitional provision, not one that grants power to regulate. And, more importantly, subsection 21 (g)(3) does not express any intent on the part of Congress to vest in the OCC the authority to 22 regulate operating subsidiaries to the exclusion of the states.

23 Only by misconstruing the legislative history of the GLBA do plaintiffs try to 24 convince this Court that it contains some support for the alleged grant of authority to the OCC to 25

26 ² Plaintiffs misstate this Court's Preliminary Injunction Order when they claim "The Court also noted in its preliminary 27 injunction order that the GLBA Conference Report supports the OCC's regulation allowing national banks to establish 28 operating subsidiaries." Plaintiffs' Opposition, at page 7 (emphasis added). Rather, this Court acknowledged that the Senate Report "addresses national banks' authority to conduct authorized banking business through operating subsidiaries. . . ." Preliminary Injunction Order, at page 9.

1 promulgate such regulations.³ However, the very section of the Senate Report relied on by plaintiffs 2 never mentions the OCC but rather, recognizes that national banks have been authorized to invest in 3 operating subsidiaries, which may engage in only those activities that the national bank is permitted
4 to engage in. See Preliminary Injunction Order, at page 10 (quoting S. Rep. No. 106-44, at 6 5 (1999)). Although recognizing that national banks may have operating subsidiaries, there is nothing 6 indicating an intent by Congress, either express or implied, to grant to the OCC the broad-reaching 7 authority they claim in this case over operating subsidiaries.

8 The Commissioner relied on the maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius, to 9 support his argument that the implied recognition in the GLBA of operating subsidiaries could not 10 be the authority required for the OCC to promulgate its' regulations.⁴ Countering this argument, 11 plaintiffs contend that the maxim is disfavored in the administrative setting where an agency is 12 interpreting a statute. Plaintiffs' Opposition, at pages 5-6; See also Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural 13 Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 842 (1984). What plaintiffs fail to realize, however, 14 is that no administrative agency may interpret a statute where Congress has not given them express 15 authority to do so. Id. at 843-844. The Commissioner is not relying on the maxim for the 16 proposition that Congress has clearly resolved the issue. See Mobile Communications Corp. of Am.
17 v. FCC, 77 F.3d 1399 (D.C. Cir. 1996). Rather, it is the Commissioner's position that any alleged 18 implication in the GLBA is not, and cannot be, the express grant of authority necessary to support 19 the OCC's actions.

20 Whether relying on the NBA or the GLBA, neither plaintiffs nor the OCC can direct this 21 Court to any express delegation from Congress to the OCC authorizing the promulgation of 22 _____

23 ³ A reference in the Congressional report is insufficient, in any event, to support the OCC's promulgation of regulations 24 as deference to an agency's action is warranted "only when Congress has left a gap for the agency to fill pursuant to an 25 express or implied 'delegation of authority to the agency.'" Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, 26 Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 843-844 (1984); see also United States v. Mead Corporation, 533 U.S. 218, 226-227 (2001). Where 27 the agency lacks such delegated authority, such as here, there is no need for the Court to engage in the second step of the 28 Chevron analysis and inquire whether the regulations are reasonable. Motion Picture Association of America, Inc. v.
Federal Communications Commission, 309 F.3d 796, 801 (2002); see also Christensen v. Harris County, 529 U.S. 576, 596-597 (2000)

⁴ The maxim holds that where a statute provides authority for one action, and is silent as to a similar, related action, the law must be interpreted as authorizing only the former and not the latter. See Tennessee Valley Auth. v. Hill, 437 U.S.
153, 188 (1978); Nextwave Personal Communications, Inc. v. FCC, 254 F.3d 130, 152-153 (D.C. Cir. 2001), petition for cert granted, 122 S.Ct. 1202 (U.S. Mar. 4, 2002) (No. 01-657).

1 regulations giving it exclusive regulatory power over operating subsidiaries of national banks. No 2 such delegation exists. Where the agency lacks delegated authority, there is no need for the Court to 3 inquire whether the regulations promulgated by the agency are reasonable, as “an agency may not 4 promulgate even reasonable regulations that claim the force of law without delegated authority from 5 Congress.” Motion Picture Association of America, Inc. v. Federal Communications Commission, 6 309 F.3d 796, 801 (2002); see also Christensen v. Harris County, 529 U.S. 576, 596-597 (2000).

7 Accordingly, this Court should grant the Commissioner’s motion for summary judgment and 8 rule that the OCC exceeded its delegated authority in promulgating 12 C.F.R. §7.4006.

9 B. Section 7.4006 Cannot Be Applied Retroactively

10 There will be an improper retroactive effect if 12 C.F.R. section 7.4006 is applied as 11 requested by plaintiffs. Plaintiffs fail to make this Court aware that the case relied upon in their 12 opposition, American Mining Congress v. United States Env’tl. Prot. Agency, 965 F.2d 759 (9th Cir.
13 1992), was decided before the Supreme Court set forth the controlling test Landgraf v. U.S.I. Film
14 Prods., 511 U.S. 244 (1994). As such, under Landgraf, 12 C.F.R. 7.4006 is to be applied 15 prospectively as the rule states on its face. Landgraf at 280. Nonetheless, American Mining 16 Congress supports the Commissioner’s position that preventing him from exercising authority over 17 WFHMI for at least activity prior to August 1, 2001 will in fact make the application of 12 C.F.R.
18 section 7.4006 retroactive. As stated by the Ninth Circuit in American Mining Congress, “a 19 retroactive rule is one that alters the past legal consequences of past action.” Id. at 769. For the 20 Court to rule as the plaintiffs have requested would alter the legal consequences of WFHMI’s past 21 actions by now making the past illegal actions of WFHMI legal. The court in American Mining 22 Congress went on to further state that “[a]gencies generally do not have the authority to issue rules 23 having a retroactive effect in the absence of an express Congressional grant of such authority.” Id. at 24 769, citing Bowen v. Georgetown Univ. Hosp., 488 U.S. 204. 208 (1988). Plaintiffs have cited to no 25 such express Congressional grant of authority to the OCC to make their rules regarding operating 26 subsidiaries, let alone to make those rules retroactive. However, this is of no consequence as the 27 OCC specifically stated that this rule would not be effective until August 1, 2001.
28

1 A finding of non-retroactivity is further demanded by the facts in this matter. WFHMI chose 2 to be a CRMLA and CFLL licensee, and chose to maintain those licenses despite being acquired by 3 a national bank and the later promulgation of the preemption rule. (SUF NOS. 5 & 9-12). WFHMI
4 must accept the consequences that go along with violating the laws of such licensure. To accept 5 plaintiffs' argument would allow a lender to completely escape liability for its past illegal conduct.

6 This Court, in its ruling on plaintiffs' request for a temporary restraining order, properly 7 rejected Plaintiffs' arguments at least with respect to the Commissioner moving forward with the 8 revocation proceedings, finding that WFHMI created its own predicament "by its apparent failure to 9 comply with California's licensing requirements" and that "[i]t would be ironic for an injunction to 10 issue in such circumstances since WFHMI could have avoided the harm it contends it will suffer had 11 it chosen to comply with the requirements of the California licenses it possesses." TRO Order at 5.
12 This Court went on to find that "Defendant's showing embraces the California public interest of 13 enforcing California's licensing requirements on entities issued such licenses." TRO Order at 5.
14 This Court again rejected plaintiffs' argument with respect to the revocation proceedings in its 15 preliminary injunction order by exempting the revocation proceedings from the coverage of its order.
16 PI Order at 15-16.

17 Were the court to find in favor of plaintiffs based upon federal preemption of the CRMLA 18 and the CFLL, it should have no effect on the conduct of WFHMI prior to August 1, 2001.
19 Accordingly, the Commissioner must be allowed to assert his jurisdiction under the CRMLA and the 20 CFLL, including revocation of licenses, for conduct that occurred prior to that date.

21 II. PLAINTIFFS CONCEDE WELLS FARGO CANNOT DEMONSTRATE ITS 22 STANDING TO BE A PARTY TO THIS ACTION

23 Plaintiffs, in their opposition, concede that the test for establishing standing is the three part 24 test set forth in San Diego Gun Rights Committee v. Reno, 98 F.3d 1121 (9th Cir. 1996). See 25 Plaintiffs' Opposition, Section II. Notwithstanding, plaintiffs make no attempt to show the Court 26 how Wells Fargo meets that test, thereby acknowledging that Wells Fargo lacks standing in this 27 matter.
28

1 The only assertion made by plaintiffs is that Wells Fargo has suffered an injury-in-fact by 2 virtue of the Commissioner’s revocation proceedings commenced against WFHMI, a separate legal 3 entity. Plaintiff’s Opposition, page 12, lines 4-6. However, plaintiffs can cite no authority in 4 support of their proposition that an alleged injury against a subsidiary is an injury against the parent.
 5 Moreover, except in very limited circumstances, a parent will not be held responsible for the acts of 6 its subsidiary. Securities Industry Ass’n v. Fed. Home Loan Bank Board, 588 F.Supp. 749, 754 7 (D.C. Dist. 1984). Accordingly, in that Wells Fargo would most likely not be held responsible for 8 the illegal and/or harmful acts of WFHMI, it should not be able to enjoy any legal benefits that may 9 possibly befall WFHMI.

10 III. THE CALIFORNIA PER DIEM INTEREST STATUTE DOES NOT FALL WITHIN 11 THE TERMS OF THE DIDMCA PREEMPTION CLAUSE

12 No matter how many times plaintiffs assert that the California per diem interest statute falls 13 within the plain meaning of DIDMCA, they do so without giving this Court any authority for that 14 proposition and in contravention of the express statutory language. There is no clear and manifest 15 intent of Congress to preempt California statutes concerning when the lender may begin to charge 16 interest. See California v. Arc America Corp., 490 U.S. 93, 102 (1989). As plaintiffs admit 17 DIDMCA only preempts state laws “expressly limiting the rate or amount of interest, discount points, 18 finance charges, or other charges . . . secured by a first lien on residential real property . . .” 12 U.S.C.
 19 § 1735f-7a(a)(1)(emphasis added). Plaintiffs’ Opposition, page 13. Neither California Financial 20 Code 50204(o) nor California Civil Code 2948.5 expressly limit an interest rate or amount. Rather, 21 these state statutes only establish the date upon which the per diem interest may begin to be assessed 22 upon a borrower.

23 A. Plaintiffs’ Interpretation of Judicial Authority Is Faulty

24 While dismissing the rationale set forth in the First Circuit Court of Appeals case on point⁵, 25 plaintiffs inaccurately contend the Eastern District Court of Michigan may be construed as having 26
 27

28 ⁵ Grunbeck v. Dime Savings Bank of New York, FSB, 74 F.3d 331 (1st Cir. 1996)

1 upheld DIDMCA preemption as to a per diem statute such as is at issue in this matter. However, 2 such an argument fails to recognize the difference in the statutory language.

3 The Michigan statute, section 438.31c(9) at issue in Shelton v. Mutual Savings & Loan
4 Association, F.A., 738 F.Supp. 1050 (E.D. Mich. 1990) expressly identifies its applicability to a “rate 5 of interest”: ““A mortgage loan or a land contract made under this Act shall not provide for a rate of 6 interest added or deducted in advance, and interest on the mortgage loan or land contract shall be 7 computed from time to time only on the basis of unpaid balances.”” Shelton, 738 F. Supp. at 1058 8 (citing Michigan statute section 438.31c(9) (emphasis added).) In contrast, the California statutes at 9 issue here do not expressly seek to limit a rate or amount of interest but rather provides that a lender 10 may not "require a borrower to pay interest on the mortgage loan for a period in excess of one day 11 prior to recording of the mortgage or deed of trust. . . ." Cal. Fin. Code § 50204(o).

12 The California statutes before this Court do not “expressly [limit] the rate or amount of 13 interest. . . secured by a first lien on residential real property . . .” as prohibited by the DIDMCA in 14 12 U.S.C. § 1735f-7a(a)(1) (emphasis added). Further, the California per diem interest statutes do 15 not seek to impose limitations to impede the loan market, as do usury laws, which were addressed by 16 the DIDMCA enactment. Grunbeck v. Dime Savings Bank of New York, FSB, 74 F.3d 331, 338 n. 7; 17 339.

18 The First Circuit Court of Appeals concluded that the simple interest statute (“SIS”) of New 19 Hampshire, which states that "any first mortgage home loan . . . shall provide for the computation of 20 interest on a simple interest basis” did not expressly limit the rate or amount of interest. Id. at 340.
21 Similar to the law at issue here, the simple interest statute placed no restriction on the “rate” or 22 “amount” of interest the borrower could be charged. Id. at 337. “Thus, nothing in the SIS prevents a 23 lender from contracting for whatever simple interest rate will exact an interest return equal to or 24 greater than whatever rate and amount of interest would be recoverable through compounding.” Id.

25 Further support that the Commissioner properly applied Grunbeck can be found in Larsen v.
26 Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10023 (Ill. 2001). The Larsen court found 27 that Congress did not mean for DIDMCA to preempt all interest charges since interest charges that 28 constitute prepayment penalties fall outside the scope of the Act. The Larsen court noted that other

1 courts have found that state statutes regulating the computation of interest on federally insured loans 2 are not preempted by federal law, citing Grunbeck. The court in Larsen specifically declined to 3 interpret the term “rate or amount of interest” so liberally as to preempt any state law that has an 4 effect on how much interest a borrower must pay. Larsen at 3. Yet, that is the gist of plaintiffs’ 5 argument here. As in Grunbeck and Larsen, such an argument must be rejected.

6 B. Plaintiffs’ Arguments That DIDMCA Does Preempt California Statutes Are 7 Unpersuasive

8 In their opposition, plaintiffs resort to a mathematical equation in an attempt to convince this 9 Court that the California per diem statutes “expressly limit” the rate or amount of interest charged.
 10 Plaintiff’s Opposition, page 16. Indeed, plaintiffs’ explanation confirms the Commissioner’s point:
 11 the California statutes do not, on their face, expressly limit the rate or amount of interest.

12 Further, by inserting actual quantities into the equations provided by plaintiffs, the fallacy of 13 their argument becomes evident: i (interest) = p (principal) ($5,000) × r (rate) (7%) × t (time) (1 day) 14 = 350, by adjusting the r (rate) charged, $i = p$ ($5,000) × r (8%) × t (1 day) = 400 and keeping time and 15 principal as constants, the rate of interest may be varied and the amount of interest collected 16 changed. Therefore, contrary to the claim of plaintiffs, WFHMI would have the ability to manipulate 17 the rate of interest it charges regardless of whether the amount of time that such interest may be 18 collected remains constant, as required by the California statutes. Despite plaintiffs’ contentions, 19 nothing in the per diem statutes would prevent a lender from disclosing to and bargaining with 20 borrowers for additional fees or charges that it might use to cover any alleged lost per diem interest 21 income.

22 Plaintiffs’ claim that the California per diem statute is preempted by DIDMCA must, 23 therefore, fail. Plaintiffs provide scant authority in the face of the well-reasoned Grunbeck appellate 24 case. The plain reading of the California statute, confirmed by plaintiffs’ mathematical formula, 25 shows no language expressly limiting the amount or rate of interest being charged. And, the 26 legislative aim of DIDMCA (to prevent disruption in the supply of home mortgage loans) is not 27 frustrated by California’s application of the per diem statute.

1 IV. THE COMMISSIONER IS ENTITLED TO SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON 2 PLAINTIFFS' CLAIM OF RETALIATION

3 The undisputed facts show that the Commissioner is entitled to summary judgment on Count 4 IV of the First Amended Complaint as a matter of law. There is an absence of a genuine issue as to 5 a material fact on plaintiffs' specious retaliation claim. Plaintiffs' have failed to submit any 6 admissible evidence to show that the Commissioner's license revocation actions constituted 7 retaliation against WFHMI because the plaintiffs' filed this action.

8 Summary judgment should be granted when a party fails to show a genuine issue as to a 9 material fact that the party bears the burden of proof of at trial, and judgment is appropriate against 10 that party as a matter of law. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). Once the moving 11 party has met its initial burden, the burden shifts to the non-moving party that bears the burden of 12 proof at trial to show that there is a genuine issue for trial by going beyond the pleadings to its own 13 affidavits or to discovery responses. Id. at 324. Summary judgment cannot be defeated by evidence 14 that is not sufficiently probative, or only colorable, it must be such that a reasonable jury could find 15 in the non-moving party's favor. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248-252 (1986).

16 It is undisputed that: (1) in December 2002, the Commissioner demanded that WFHMI 17 perform an audit to identify violations and make appropriate refunds of per diem interest 18 overcharges in violation of Financial Code section 50204(o) and identify instances of understating 19 finance charges in violation of the Truth in Lending Act ("TILA"). (SUF No. 18); (2) between 20 December 2002 and January 2003, WFHMI requested and was granted several continuances to 21 respond to the Commissioner's demand. (SUF No. 19); (3) on January 17, 2003, the Commissioner 22 demanded that no later than January 23, 2003, WFHMI provide the Department with a plan to 23 conduct the audit and make the refunds. (SUF No. 19); (4) on January 22, 2003, WFHMI stated in a 24 letter to the Commissioner that it would not comply with the Commissioner's demands. (SUF No.
25 20); (5) plaintiffs instituted this lawsuit on January 27, 2003 alleging that WFHMI was not 26 obligated to comply with the CRMLA, the CFLL or the Commissioner's demands. (SUF No. 21); 27 (6) compliance with the statutes and applicable regulations is a necessary predicate to maintaining 28 CRMLA and CFLL licenses. (SUF No. 7); (7) WFHMI acknowledged in its complaint that failure

1 to comply with the Commissioner's demands and state law would result in an enforcement action.
2 (SUF No. 22); and (8) on February 4, 2003, the Commissioner instituted two administrative 3 proceedings to revoke WFHMI's CRMLA and CFLL licenses. (SUF No. 23).

4 To establish its claim of retaliation, the burden is initially on WFHMI to show that the filing
5 of this lawsuit was a "substantial" or "motivating" factor in the Commissioner's actions to institute 6 the administrative revocation actions. Mt. Healthy City School District Board of Education v. Doyle, 7 429 U.S. 274, 287 (1977). As demonstrated by the undisputed facts set forth above, plaintiffs fail to 8 carry this burden. Plaintiffs' argue that the mere timing of the events is sufficient to show the 9 Commissioner's retaliatory motive. However, as plaintiffs' concede, proximity in time, considered 10 without regard to its factual setting, is not enough by itself to justify a grant of summary judgment 11 either for or against the plaintiff. Coszalter v. City of Salem, 320 F.3d 968, 978 (9th Cir. 2003). See 12 Plaintiffs' Opposition, page 20, n. 15. Plaintiffs' have failed to submit any other admissible 13 evidence to establish a retaliatory motive.

14 Plaintiffs' attempt to assert that the Commissioner has not shown that he would have 15 instituted revocation actions even if this lawsuit were not filed as required by Soranno's Gasco, Inc.
16 v. Morgan, 874 F.2d 1310, 1315 (9th Cir. 1989). Plaintiffs' Opposition, page 22, lines 10 – 11, n.
17 17. This argument is unavailing. As stated above, unlike Soranno's Gasco, plaintiffs have set forth 18 no facts to support an inference of unlawful retaliation. See Defendant's Memorandum of Points
19 and Authorities In Support Of Defendant's Motion For Summary Judgment Or In The Alternative 20 Partial Summary Judgment, page 33, line 23 to page 34, line 15.

21 Plaintiffs' assert that the only basis for the Commissioner to commence revocation 22 proceedings is the filing of this lawsuit because the Commissioner has never sought to revoke a 23 lender's state license for per diem interest and TILA violations in any other case. Plaintiffs' 24 Opposition, page 21, lines 9 – 16. However, plaintiffs submit no evidence to support this assertion 25 and mere speculation is insufficient to meet their burden.

26 Next plaintiffs' assert that revocation may have been entirely appropriate if WFHMI had 27 simply announced that it was refusing to comply with state law, however WFHMI continued to 28 comply with all applicable state laws pending a ruling by the court on the preliminary injunction

1 motion. Plaintiffs' Opposition, page 22, n. 17. WFHMI did comply with some technical provisions 2 of the CRMLA and CFLL such as filing reports, paying assessments and submitting to regulatory 3 examinations. However, WFHMI was violating the per diem interest provisions of the CRMLA and 4 understating finance charges in violation of TILA. It is undisputed that on January 22, 2003, 5 WFHMI stated in a letter to the Commissioner that it was an operating subsidiary of a national bank,
6 and as such, it was subject to the exclusive federal regulation of the OCC and would not comply 7 with his audit and refund demand. (SUF No. 20). In this letter, WFHMI did announce that it would 8 not comply with state law.

9 Therefore, WFHMI placed the Commissioner on notice that it would not comply with the 10 CRMLA, the CFLL or the Commissioner's demand by letter and by filing this lawsuit. The 11 Commissioner had no choice but to institute revocation actions. It does not matter whether this 12 notice of non-compliance is achieved by filing a federal lawsuit, telling the Commissioner by letter it 13 does not intend comply, or even simply ignoring the Commissioner's demand. The CRMLA and the 14 CFLL require license applicants to agree to comply with the provisions of the law and with any 15 order or rule of the commissioner. Cal. Fin. Code §§ 50124(a)(7); 22101(a); Cal. Code Regs, tit.10, 16 § 1422. The Commissioner is under statutory and constitutional mandates to enforce the laws under 17 his jurisdiction. See Cal. Const. art. III, § 3.5.

18 Moreover, plaintiffs ask this Court not to address their retaliation claim at this stage of the 19 case if the Court reaffirms its preliminary ruling that WFHMI is exclusively regulated by the OCC.
20 Plaintiffs' Opposition, page 18, lines 17 – 20. Plaintiffs' further state that they will not pursue their 21 retaliation claims unless this Court or the Court of Appeals rules that WFHMI is required to have 22 licenses from the state in order to engage in mortgage banking activities in California. Plaintiffs'
23 Opposition, page 18, line 23 to page 19, line 4. It appears that plaintiffs are requesting this Court 24 keep their retaliation claims on hold, perhaps indefinitely, until they get an adverse court ruling.
25 This position is untenable. In essence, plaintiffs want a partial summary judgment in their favor on 26 the preemption and DIDMCA issues and no ruling on the retaliation claim until after appeal.
27 However, since a partial summary judgment is merely an interlocutory order and is subject to 28 revision, it is not immediately appealable without a specific judicial finding. Fed. Rule Civ. P.

1 54(b). The Commissioner has moved for summary judgment on all counts of the First Amended 2 Complaint and is entitled to a ruling from this Court on all counts, including the retaliation claim.
3 This claim is appropriate and ripe for summary judgment at this time. The undisputed material facts 4 to adjudicate this issue, as stated above, will not change at some uncertain point in the future if 5 plaintiffs' obtain a court ruling they do not like.

6 Therefore, this Court should grant the Commissioner's motion for summary judgment on the 7 retaliation claim.

8 V. PREEMPTION DOES NOT ESTABLISH AN ACTIONABLE CLAIM UNDER 42
9 U.S.C. SECTION 1983

10 This Court should determine at this time that plaintiffs have no cause of action under 42 11 U.S.C. section 1983, ruling in favor of the Commissioner on summary judgment, and not delay this 12 issue as requested by plaintiffs in their opposition. Opposition Brief, page 23, lines 13-14. This 13 particular aspect of the case is purely a question of law as there are no factual issues, material or 14 otherwise, and thus, is appropriate for summary judgment. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56(c) 15 provides that summary judgment "shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers 16 to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no 17 genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter 18 of law." Summary judgment is appropriate where the case presents a pure question of law, such as 19 here, and where there is no dispute as to the historical facts of the case. Edwards v. Aguillard, 482
20 U.S. 578, (1987); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). Summary judgment 21 should be granted when a party fails to show a genuine issue as to a material fact that the party bears 22 the burden of proof of at trial, and judgment is appropriate against that party as a matter of law.
23 Celotex, at 322.

24 Further, while citing to Golden State Transit Corp. v. City of Los Angeles, 493 U.S. 103 25 (1989) as supporting a cause of action under section 1983, plaintiffs readily acknowledge that in 26 Golden State Transit Corp preemption claims were found to be cognizable under 42 U.S.C. section 27 1983 only in certain instances. Plaintiffs make absolutely no attempt to show the Court how they 28

1 come within the ambit of Golden State Transit Corp., thus conceding that they are unable to meet 2 the standards set forth in Golden State Transit Corp.

3 Plaintiffs have the burden of establishing every essential element of their case. As plaintiffs 4 have made an insufficient showing on this issue in which they have the burden of proof, the court
5 may grant summary judgment “as a matter of law”. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 6 (1986). Further, the Commissioner is not required to submit affidavits negating plaintiffs’ claims in 7 order for the Court to grant summary judgment. Id. at 323.

8 Plaintiffs’ claims as set forth in counts I-III of the First Amended Complaint (“FAC”) are 9 based solely upon the issue of preemption. FAC ¶¶ 33-51. As stated by the Ninth Circuit Court of 10 Appeals in White Mountain Apache Tribe v. Williams, 810 F.2d 844 (9th Cir. 1985), the “Supremacy 11 Clause . . . establishes federal-state priorities; it does not create individual rights, nor does it ‘secure’ 12 such rights within the meaning of section 1983. Id. at 848. Thus, “preemption of state law under the 13 Supremacy Clause . . . will not support an action under § 1983, and will not, therefore, support a 14 claim of attorney’s fees under § 1988.” Id. at 850. Accord Howard v. Burlingame, 937 F.2d 1376, 15 1380 (9th Cir. 1991).

16 Further, the Ohio district court order cited by plaintiffs in their opposition is just that, a 17 district court order. It has absolutely no precedential value in this action. Furthermore, this action is 18 readily distinguishable from the Ohio case. The Ohio case dealt with a federal statute and the 19 business operations of the national banks themselves, as opposed to this action which only involves a 20 federal rule and an operating subsidiary, which voluntarily submitted to state licensure and 21 maintained those licenses despite passage of 12 C.F.R. § 7.4006. Additionally, as pointed out by the 22 district court at page 13 of the order, there was established case law on the issue (Barnett Bank of 23 Marion County v. Nelson, 517 U.S. 25 (1996)). This action is a case of first impression, and also 24 involves a mandate on the Commissioner under the California Constitution to enforce the law until 25 such time as a court of appeals rules that the law is unconstitutional or preempted by federal law.
26 See Cal. Const. Art. III, § 3.5.

27 Accordingly, as plaintiffs have not established that they meet the elements of a section 1983 28 action, their first three counts must fail as a matter of law with respect to having been brought under

1 42 U.S.C. section 1983 as must their request for attorney's fees under section 1988.

2 CONCLUSION

3 For the foregoing reasons as well as those discussed in the Commissioner memorandum 4 dated April 4, 2003, the Commissioner submits that summary judgment against plaintiffs should be 5 granted because the NBA does not expressly preempt or conflict with the CRMLA and the CFLL, 6 nor grant to the OCC exclusive visitorial powers over WFHMI, federal regulations 12 C.F.R. section 7 5.34 and 12 C.F.R. section 7.4006 were improperly promulgated by the OCC, DIDMCA does not 8 preempt California Financial Code section 50204(o) or California Civil Code section 2948.5, there 9 has been no retaliation by the Commissioner in bringing the revocation actions, and this action was 10 improperly brought under 42 U.S.C. section 1983. Based thereon, the Commissioner respectfully 11 requests this Court grant his motion for summary judgment. In the alternative, the Commissioner 12 requests the Court enter partial summary judgment as to all issues pertaining to plaintiffs' four 13 causes of action for which the Court considers there to be no triable issues of material fact.
